The advertiser can be an individual or an organization that wishes to place an advertisement in order to reach out its target audience or target market for its products and services. The advertiser will engage an advertising agency to produce the marketing content. It is wise for both parties to go into an agreement to outline the rights of each party involved. The Advertising Agency Agreement will describe the legal rights to the work developed by the advertising agency chosen by the advertiser. This article will focus on the Advertising Agency Agreement guidelines. First of all the Advertising Agency Agreement should acknowledge the parties involved. It should clearly indicate the names, full address and contact information of the advertiser if it is an individual. If it is a company then you can include the same details of the company. Also include the details of the advertising agency or the marketing service provider. The agreement should also have the date, month and the year that the agreement was signed. This is important to mark the start of the contract term and also to show the exact details of the contract. These details are crucial since it is a legal document that can be used for legal procedures. The Advertising Agency Agreement should also clearly outline the engagement between the advertiser and the advertising agency. The advertiser engages the agency to render the advertising services in regards to the advertiser's planning, preparing and placing the advertisement. Then the advertising agency agrees to render the services. The advertiser will present his proposal products and services for the agency to analyze and prepare their advertising proposal to the advertiser's approval. So before the advertising agency goes to an agreement with the advertiser, they should have all the details of the advertising service. So the terms will be outlined clearly and there will be no misinformation. The advertising payment should also be included in the Advertising Agency Agreement, so that both the parties can agree on the charges and mode of payment. The advertising agency will quote the advertising charges depending on the products and services that the advertiser has presented to them. The advertiser will negotiate the price if it is too high and both parties will settle on the price that is fair to both of parties. The agreed charges will then be put down in writing. This is important so that after the work is done the advertiser will pay the amount agreed and everything will be settled fairly without having any disputes. The agreement should also show the payment frame time, if the payment is paid in installments. Lastly the Advertising Agency Agreement should indicate the terms and condition of the content use and possession during the term of the agreement. The contract should also outline the terms of contract termination in the event where either of the parties violates the contract. Also leave a space for both parties to sign the contract showing their commitment to the agreements.
